Establish a Permanent Endowment with the UM Foundation

PERMANENT ENDOWMENTS

A named endowment fund is a gift to the Foundation in which the principal is to remain intact in perpetuity and the annual earnings are used to support scholarships, faculty and other forms of academic excellence for the University.

Investments

- Funds in the Foundation's endowment pool are invested under the guidance of the Joint Committee on University Investments. This committee recommends the asset allocation targets and endowment spending policies to the Foundation's Board of Directors and works within those parameters in its oversight of the investments.
- Endowment funds are invested and managed to produce the greatest annual return while balancing principal safety.
- The Joint Committee employs an outside consultant (currently Fund Evaluation Group) to assist with its responsibilities.
- The Joint Committee's long-term objective is to generate an endowment return equal to or greater than the distribution (or spending) rate plus inflation as measured by the Consumer Price Index (CPI).
- The approved spending rate is set by the Foundation's Board of Directors and may range from 4 to 4.5 percent as current market conditions dictate.

Establishing an Endowment

- An endowment gift may be made via a one-time donation or over a specified number of years.
- A Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) is produced among the Donor(s), the respective University departments, and the Foundation outlining the terms of the endowment and the criteria for distributions.
- The Foundation may not change or alter the MOA without the express written consent of the Donor(s).
- Endowed funds may only be utilized pursuant to the terms of the MOA and are not available for any other purpose.

Benefits of an Endowment

- Endowments play a critical role in the long-term financial stability of the University.
- State appropriations continue to decline as a percentage of the University's operating budget.
- Endowment distributions aid by adding financial strength to the University's future and to the future of students for generations to come.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

1. What is the minimum gift to create an endowment?

Endowments can be created and participate in the investment pool with a minimum gift of $50,000. This amount can be donated over a number of specified years or via a one-time gift.

2. When do endowments enter the investment pool?

Funds enter the investment pool in the month following receipt of the gift.

3. After entering the investment pool, when will a new endowment award its first distribution?

Upon reaching the targeted endowment level in the MOA, endowments should be allowed to build for up to two years to ensure sufficient earnings prior to distributions. This period provides time for the endowment to grow and reduces the potential for volatility of distribution amounts in the early years of a new fund. Many donors wish to fund needs such as scholarships and faculty positions earlier and set aside additional funds in restricted accounts to help accelerate the awarding process.

4. What is the difference between an endowment account and a restricted account?

Gifts to endowments are held in perpetuity as named and are invested in an effort to maintain an equal and consistent flow of funds in perpetuity. The investment intent is to create a spendable distribution that will maintain its purchasing power for decades to come. The long-term investment return goal is Consumer Price Index (CPI) plus 5 percent.

Restricted accounts are not invested in the endowment pool as the spending is fully expected in the near term. These funds are held by the Foundation for the purpose intended by the donor and resemble a demand deposit account with a financial institution.

5. How is the endowment spending distribution calculated?

The Foundation uses a smoothing formula based on a rolling 36-month average of the ending fair market value of the account each calendar year. This calculated value multiplied by the current spending rate (4 to 4.5 percent) determines the distribution for the next fiscal year. Distributions are made quarterly during the following fiscal year.

6. When is the University made aware of the distribution?

The Foundation finalizes projections and disseminates that information to University administration in March. This information assists with the upcoming fiscal year scholarship awarding and budgeting process.

7. Can the distribution for an endowment ever go down from one year to the next?

Yes. While the market value reported each month can be quite volatile, the distributions, which are based on a 36-month moving average, typically change very gradually.

8. What fees are charged to the endowment?

The total fee charged to endowments is 0.8% annually, which is well below the average fees charged by all other SEC public institutions. This fee is split between the UM Foundation for asset management and University Development to provide support for the University's fundraising activities. This fee is calculated on the 36-month average ending fair market value as of December 31st, and is allocated in monthly installments over the succeeding fiscal year. Any fees charged by individual fund managers are netted against their monthly returns.

9. What happens when endowment earnings exceed the amount needed for spending and fees?

Each endowment receives its proportionate share of the investment pool's total return. Earnings in excess of the spending distribution and the fees remain in the endowment.

10. What effects do negative or very low returns have on the Foundation's endowments?

When the investment return is less than the spending rate, the balance of the endowment is reduced accordingly. Due to the distributions and fees, the value of the endowment can go down even when investment returns are slightly positive. The Foundation's spending policy is based on its projection that, in the long term, the average investment rate of return will equal or exceed the sum of the rates for spending and inflation.

11. What happens if the market value of an endowment drops below the sum of the principle of the gifts made into the endowment?

This situation is referred to as an "underwater endowment" and was prevalent in many endowment portfolios following the last recession. In this situation, the endowment distributions are reduced to cash earnings projected for each endowment (interest, dividends and realized gains/losses) such that the corpus of the endowment is not reduced. Distributions return to normal spending rates when the market value returns to levels above the corpus that support the current distribution spending rate.

12. Where do I find current information on recent endowment returns and endowment investment allocations?

The Foundation's website updates this information on a quarterly basis and can be found at <http://umfoundation.com//main/endowment-information/>.

13. Where can I find a sample agreement that is needed to create an endowment?

The Donor(s) and the Foundation enter into a formal Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) upon the establishment of each endowment. This agreement is essential to ensure the donors' intent for these funds is adhered to in future periods. Since these funds are to be held in perpetuity, the MOA helps to ensure the future administrators of the endowment clearly understand the purpose of the endowment allowing for compliance with its stipulations. Donors often request to add specialized criteria and qualifications for an award, but the remaining portions are relatively standard. The sample agreement is included here or available at <http://umfoundation.com//main/endowment-information/>.

14. Does paragraph 8 of the sample MOA mean the criteria can be changed?

No. This paragraph is in no way intended to replace donor intent. It is only added to allow future administrators of the endowment working with the University to alter the award in the event of an unforeseen operational change. As endowments are held in perpetuity, and the future unpredictable, it is important to maintain some flexibility should changes in University structure or operations occur decades from now. For example, if a particular department or school were to be merged or altered in some way, it would be beneficial to have existing language allowing the Foundation to follow donor intent as closely as possible within the written agreement.

15. What financial information is routinely provided to donor(s) of an established endowment?

Each fall, the Foundation distributes reports to donors who have established an endowment. These reports provide a financial summary of each endowment's balance, disbursements and growth for the fiscal year. The Annual Endowment Report summarizes investment performance and composition of the fund held in the University of Mississippi Foundation endowment pool.
